New website of the Institut fuer Europäische Politik

Berlin, 09.12.2021

Content on European integration is easily accessible through a theme-based approach. The resulting knowledge platform offers experts and interested citizens alike the possibility to educate themselves politically.

The Institut fuer Europäische Politik (IEP) has a new website and a new look. A new feature is the topic-based approach: Content can be accessed through keywords. All contributions aim to describe and classify complicated issues in an understandable way. The media format of each article is recognisable at first glance.

Political information and classification are even more important at times of advancing Euroscepticism and attacks on the rule of law. Content on European integration is easily reachable on the new site to people interested in politics.

The IEP team is available for interviews, statements or background briefings. The diverse and individual expertise of each employee are also made visible via keywords.

The IEP is a non-profit organisation that scientifically analyses issues of European integration and promotes their practical implementation. The Berlin Institute works non-partisan and is one of the leading foreign and European policy research institutions in the Federal Republic of Germany.
