Dismantle Disinformation on Climate Change

15/16 June 2023, Berlin

The spread of disinformation is a constant challenge for democratic societies in Europe. It has the potential to undermine democratic processes and enhance societal polarisation. At the same time climate change is arguably one of the most pressing global issues that we face today and tomorrow. It has become a contested sphere of intense political and societal debate, thus an area where disinformation flourishes. For instance, information falsely stating that global warming is not caused by human activity, serves to prevent meaningful climate change measures.

- Have you come across disinformation which denies man-made climate change or takes scientific facts out of context to confuse and deligitimise climate action?
- Do you want to discuss policy action against the spread of disinformation in the European Union (EU)?
- Are you interested in exchanging views and developng ideas with young people on what can be done to dismantle climate change related disinformation and lessen its impact?
